John Walker went into Cole & Cole's store yesterday afternoon after making some purchases started to leave the place without paying for them. He was called back and upon the money being demanded he displayed a good deal of temper. A fracas ensued, in the course of which the clerk who had waited on Walker had one of his hands dislocated. An information was filed in the superior court charging Walker with disturbing the peace, and he was arrested. His ineptness cropped out at intervals all during the afternoon. Walker was taken to the county jail where he would be arraigned tomorrow. He was looked for hourly at the jail between him and the other prisoners.

How Republicans of the State Managed to Score a Landslide.

NATIONAL ISSUES WERE PUSHED FORWARD

It Will Result in a Modification of the Present Prohibitory Law, So Declares Chairman James E. Blythe.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—Chairman James E. Blythe of the Iowa republican state central committee came to town today and was telling local Republicans that they had won a landslide.

"One reason for our success," said he, "is that we pursued a policy under which we nationalized the issues. Commencing a year ago we bent our energies to place the politics of Iowa again on a national footing. We went into the canvass this year on economic issues, the tariff and the financial condition of the country, leaving local issues to secondary position, to which they are entitled. The democrats also helped us."

Two years ago and four years ago Governor Blythe was elected by the combination of two distinct voting forces which were massed against the republicans. These forces were the farmers and the miners, who held the republican party responsible for the radical railroad legislation enacted, and the vote that was opposed to prohibition.

Some of Blythe's Mistakes. "I believe that the democratic candidate made a fatal mistake in endeavoring to evade all national issues which were necessary to the success of the voters, and endeavoring to talk about local affairs, in which the people could not be interested. While the democratic press engaged in vituperation and scandal against the republicans and degraded decent democrats, the reaction was worth many hundred votes to Mr. Jackson."

THE TRAIN OF THE FUTURE.

A Glimpse of Railroad Luxuries in England Two Years Hence.

The London Review glances into the immediate future and sketches railroad luxuries up to date:

Scene—A third-class corridor dining car express.

Attendant (in gorgeous livery and scarlet plush breeches, silk stockings and powdered hair)—Ladies and gentlemen, dinner is served. (The third-class passengers saunter into the dining car.)

Passenger (picking up the menu)—I say, this is English.

Passenger—Why isn't it French as in the first-class cars? Is it a slight on our linguistic acquisitions?

Head Waiter—Very sorry, sir; I'll report the matter to the superintendent.

Passenger—O, bring me some caviare.

Head Waiter—Very sorry, sir; caviare is not on the menu today.

Lady Passenger—No caviare? O, what a shame! Have you any salmon?

Waiter—What is that, madam?

Passenger—What is that? How do you waiters get your appointments. Is there no competitive examination?

Waiter—No, madam, not yet, but there is talk of such a thing. (To another guest.) Thank or clear, sir?

Passenger—Thank or clear, sir?

Waiter—It's mock turtle! I suppose that's because we're third class. (I shall write to the Times. The dinner of seven courses proceeds amidst considerable grumbling.)

Attendant (at conclusion of dinner)—Smoking concert car to the left, gentlemen, please. Nonsmoking concert car to the right. (Distributing programs gratis.)

Passenger—Any extra charge?

Attendant—No, sir; it is all included in the charge for dinner.

Lady (looking at program)—You have no really first-class artists.

Attendant—Well, madam, we haven't been able to engage Adelina Patti for the journey, but there are some very good singers.

Passenger—I don't think much of the smoking concert. I don't see Arthur Roberts' name or Albert Chevalier's.

Attendant—No, sir; they are engaged elsewhere. But it is a capital entertainment that the company provides. Perhaps you'd prefer a game of billiards, sir—billiard car is the fourth from here, sir—billiard car.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Tom Whitman's Denial Was Due to Alcoholic Prostration.

DEATH OF A WELL KNOWN CHARACTER

He Had Victims of Hurtled Treasure and Caught Victims—Mayor Walker Threatened by a Local Predecessor—News Notes of the Magic City.

Legacy of $100,000 in Memory of a Noted Jewish Lady.

By the death of Horace A. Moses, which occurred at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, a splendid bequest for the education of Hebrew boys passes to the Mickve Israel congregation of that city.

Rebecca Gratz, the testator's sister, was the original of the Rebecca in the "Ivanhoe" of Sir Walter Scott, who had heard of the beauty of her person and her intelligence through Washington Irving, who met her in this city. She was celebrated for her many charitable deeds and good works, and lived to the great age of 90 years, greatly beloved by all who knew her.

The officers of Mickve Israel congregation, who will have charge of the disposition of the bequest are: President, David H. Solis; secretary, Isaac Feinberg; treasurer, William Morris; and Rabbi Dr. S. Mordecai. This congregation was founded in 1778, and is the oldest in this country, with the exception of the well known Newport (R. I.) settlement, celebrated by Longfellow's poem, and one in New York city.

There is a character in South Omaha named Thaspick, who has acted strangely for some time. He has always been considered a harmless crank by the police and was never arrested, but once, and was then immediately discharged, after being searched.

Mayor Walker is not a man who is superstitious or particularly alarmed that he will be killed, and he has no fear of Mayor Harrison, but when this man Thaspick was seen lurking around the mayor's residence for several different days his home thought he was being stalked by a stranger who was being investigated.

He called Officer Thomas' attention to the man and Thomas took him to the station and kept him there until he was taken to the police house. He was taken to the police house and kept there until he was taken to the police house.

AN ORIENTAL TALE.

A Delicate Point Settled by the Wisdom of the Cadi.

"Sir," said Abdullah, as he appeared with his sister Fatima here the judge, "perhaps you will remember the brave Abbas, who died thirty years ago. He was our father, and left both of us his property in equal portions, on which we have hitherto subsisted in common."

"But Fatima will have it that the pearls are part of our father's legacy, and claims half of them as her share. She refuses to listen to my arguments and insists upon her claim, not, indeed, for the sake of the pearls; oh, no! I see quite plainly she wants to spoil my pleasure and that of my bride-elect, for she does not like the idea of Zaid's raid entering the paternal house as mistress. Now, wise cadi, give me judgment."

The cadi bowed his head and said: "Fatima, is the case as your brother stated?"

"It is all quite correct excepting the assertion that the string of pearls is long to him alone. How does he mean to prove that father gave it to him? I dispute the fact and claim my share; my sister does not like the idea of Zaid's raid entering the paternal house as mistress. Now, wise cadi, give me judgment."

"Well, Abdullah," said the cadi, addressing the plaintiff, "have you any living witnesses or any handwriting to prove that your father gave you the pearls?"

"I have nothing of the kind," was the reply.

"That is a bad outlook," the cadi continued. "I fear there is no prospect of an amicable settlement by persuading your sister to accept a sum of money for her share."

"No," she broke in. "I want half of the pearls."

"Very well," said the cadi, beckoning to his clerk; "I must have a report of the case drawn up before declaring judgment. Say, defendant, your name is Fatima?"

Here she blushed, hesitated, tried more than once to speak, but never uttered a syllable.

"How odd are you?" the cadi repeated. "Speak!"

"I am 28,"

"Really?" said the judge, with an ironical smile. "I hereby award the whole string of pearls to Abdullah alone. Take them, plaintiff, and go to your father's grave. Your sister, for Abbas died thirty years ago, and she is only 28."

A car shipped from the Good Hope in the new Bear Creek district, near Creede, returned 2,000.

MOTHER'S FRIEND.

A remedy which, used by Wiles, is said to experience the painful ordeal of Child-birth, proves an infallible cure for all the troubles of pregnancy, and is a safe and reliable remedy for all the dangers thereof to both mother and child. Sold by Wiles, Druggists, at all drug stores, or by mail, on receipt of price, 25c per bottle, charges paid.
